23. Lastly, Escotel asserts that Springwich, as a matter of course, grants preferential treatment to SNET's retail cellular affiliate, Linx, thereby affording it some competitive advantage over unaffiliated resellers. This is also untrue. Springwich's relationship with all its resellers, including Linx, is governed by Springwich's Connecticut Tariff. The Tariff sets forth the terms and conditions under which Springwich is to provide wholesale cellular service to the resellers. The terms of the Tariff do not vary by reseller, setting forth the rates that may be charged, the cellular services that are to be offered, and the notice that Springwich must provide to the resellers of any rate changes or special programs it plans to offer. (Springwich was required to give 30 days notice of any changes, this has recently been reduced to 5 days.) Apart from one isolated instance in nearly a decade of operations, where Linx inadvertently received notice of a special program prior to other resellers, Springwich has treated each reseller identically in accord with the terms of its Tariff.

24. This week, Springwich invited all resellers to participate in the trial of the new automated activation system. All resellers who participate in the trial will be subject to the same rules and hours of operation.
